How to confirm the details for your defence, opponent(s) and custos?

1) Permission for defence granted
2) DPC to approve the details of your defence, opponent(s) and the custos (at least 6 weeks before the public defence)

Opponent proposal form (307) is available at Doctoral student forms (aalto.fi).

Details of the defence include confirming the language, date and time (also mode/location is needed for the form)
Note

- Date and time: must be suitable for the proposed opponent and custos, and there must be suitable lecture hall available.
- Changes to appointed persons or the date/time, language
  - must be made by the Chair of the DPC.
  - Errata page might be needed for your thesis.
  - Make sure changes will not be necessary – but if they are, contact your Doctoral programme’s Doctoral education services ASAP!

- Planning the defence mode (and location) well in advance is important.
Public defence at Aalto University

During the public examination of the doctoral thesis, or the defence, the doctoral student defends the results of their doctoral thesis against public criticism and answers questions presented by the opponent, who has been appointed to evaluate the thesis. The course of the public defense is supervised by a custos, who usually is the supervising professor of the doctoral student. During this process the doctoral student is called the respondent. The public defence is also a ceremonial occasion that follows the academic traditions of each field.

On this page you can find Aalto University's instructions for arranging public defences.

Place/mode of the defence

The public defence can take place
1) at the premises of Aalto University
2) remotely over an interactive online platform such as Zoom or Teams
3) in hybrid form (both on campus & interactively online)

• IT Services offer support for online/hybrid defences, contact them several days in advance.
• Arrange for someone to monitor your Zoom during the defence.
• Send the Zoom link to your Doctoral programme as soon as possible (at the latest 15 days before)
• Check the cyber security instructions for the event
Practical arrangements

• Book a lecture hall and preparation space
• Practice the use of AV equipment in the lecture hall in advance (lobby services can help out)
• Make a plan with custos for how to proceed in case of technical issues
• Check your School’s defence protocol / proceedings & dress code (Schools' protocols for the public defence and post-doctoral party)
• Costs: Department covers opponent costs (fee, travel, accommodation), doctoral students covers the possible refreshments for audience and karonkka
Lectio precursoria

• Lectio is a 20-minute introductory lecture on your thesis topic
• Make it interesting and practice it in advance
Public defence announcement

• a concise, plain-language description of the thesis, aimed at the general public and media
• Finnish, English (and in Swedish)
• Submit your announcement text and defence details at least 15 days before the defence via Webropol form.
• Your School creates an event of your public defence at aalto.fi website under Events. Your announcement text will be included
• Think of making a press release, too!
Public display of the thesis & distribution

- Online display for 10 days before the defence
- In case of article thesis, both the summary and the published and unpublished articles are publicly accessible online.
- Link to the online display of the thesis is included in the public defence announcement. Both must be available to public for at least 10 days before the defence.
- Note: all doctoral theses are public documents and are also available at Aalto University's open access repository Aaltodoc indefinitely (separately from the public display prior to the defence).
- Each School requires you to hand in a specific number of copies of your printed thesis for the use of the School. See how your printed thesis is to be distributed and how many copies are required: https://www.aalto.fi/en/doctoral-education/finalising-your-doctoral-studies#9-distribution-of-thesis
